

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE superiority of WALKER'S PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY over other productions of the same kind has been so long established that it would be superfluous to descant upon it. He brought to the performance of his task a spirit of patient investigation, extensive grammatical knowledge, and sound judgment. But in all works relating to languages, however perfect they may originally be, Time, that greatest of all innovators, will at length make reform indispensable. It has consequently been found necessary to introduce a few changes and additions in the present reprint of Walker's Dictionary. New words and definitions have been added; definitions which, by late scientific discoveries, are proved to be erroneous, have been amended; and, in some instances, where it had become obsolete, the pronunciation has been rendered conformable to modern usage. As in all books, but more especially in a Dictionary, correctness is an object of paramount importance, the utmost care has been taken to exclude typographical errors; and it is believed that the care has not been fruitlessly bestowed. On the cheapness, the convenient size, and the elegant printing of this volume, it is needless to say a word; they are so obvious that they cannot fail to be noticed, even by superficial observers.

INTRODUCTION.

PRINCIPLES OF ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION.

THE First Principles or Elements of Pronunciation are letters:

The Letters of the English Language are:

Roman.	Italio.	Name.
A a	A a	a
B b	B b	bee
C c	C c	see
D d	D d	dee
F f	F f	eff
G g	G g	jee
H h	H h	aitch
I i	I i	i, or eye
J j	J j	j consonant, or jay
K k	K k	kay
M m	M m	em
N n	N n	en
O o	O o	o
P p	P p	pe
Q q	Q q	cue
R r	R r	ar
S s	S s	ess
T t	T t	tee
U u	U u	u, or you
V v	V v	v consonant, or vee
W w	W w	double u
X x	X x	eks
Y y	Y y	wy
Z z	Z z	zed, or izzard.

To these may be added certain combinations of letters sometimes used in printing; as ff, fi, fi, fi, and &c, or and per se and, or rather et per se and; ff, fi, fi, fi, and &c.

Our letters, says Dr. Johnson, are commonly reckoned twenty-four, because anciently i and j, as well as u and v, were expressed by the same character; but as these letters, which had always different powers, have now different forms, our alphabet may be properly said to consist of twenty-six letters.

In considering the sounds of these first principles of language, we find that some are so simple and unmixed, that there is nothing required but the opening of the mouth to make them understood, and to form different sounds. Whence they have the names of vowels or voices, or vocal sounds. On the contrary, we find that there are others, whose pronunciation depends on the particular application and use of every part of the mouth, as the teeth, the lips, the tongue, the palate, &c. which yet cannot make any one perfect sound but by their union with those vocal sounds; and these are called consonants, or letters sounding with other letters.

Definition of Vowels and Consonants.

Vowels are generally reckoned to be five in number; namely, a, e, i, o, u; y and w are called vowels when they end a syllable or word, and consonants when they begin one.

The definition of a vowel, as little liable to exception as any, seems to be the following: a vowel is a simple sound formed by a continued effusion of the breath, and a certain conformation of the mouth, without any alteration in the position, or any motion of the organs of speech, from the moment the vocal sound commences till it ends.

A consonant may be defined to be an interruption of the effusion of vocal sound, arising from the application of the organs of speech to each other.

Agreeably to this definition, vowels may be divided into two kinds, the simple and compound. The simple a, e, o, are those which are formed by one conformation of the organs only; that is, the organs remain exactly in the same position at the end as at the beginning of the letter; whereas, in the compound vowels i and u, the organs alter their position before the letter is completely sounded: nay, these letters, when commencing a syllable, do not only require a different position of the organs in order to form them perfectly, but demand such an application of the tongue to the roof of the mouth as is inconsistent with the nature of a pure vowel; for the first of these letters, i, when sounded alone, or ending a syllable with the accent upon it, is a real diphthong, composed of the sounds of a in father, and of e in the, exactly correspondent to the sound of the noun eye; and when this letter commences a syllable, as in min-ion, pin-ion, &c., the sound of e with which it terminates is squeezed into a consonant sound, like the double e heard in queen, different from the simple sound of that letter in queen, and this squeezed sound in the commencing i makes it exactly similar to y in the same situation; which, by all grammarians, is acknowledged to be a consonant. The latter of these compound vowels, u, when initial, and not shortened by a consonant, commences with this squeezed sound of e, equivalent to the y, and ends with a sound given to oo in woo and coo, which makes its name in the alphabet exactly similar to the pronoun you. If, therefore, the common definition of a vowel be just, these two letters are so far from being simple vowels, that they may more properly be called semi-consonant diphthongs.

That y and w are consonants when they begin a word, and vowels when they end one, is generally acknowledged by the best grammarians; and yet Dr. Lowth has told us that w is equivalent to oo; but, if this were the case, it would always admit of the particle an before it: for, though we have no word in the language which commences with these letters, we plainly perceive that, if we had such a word, it would readily admit of an before it, and consequently that these letters are not equivalent to w. Thus we find that the common opinion, with respect to the double capacity of these letters, is perfectly just.

Besides the vowels already mentioned, there is another simple vowel sound found under the oo in the words woo and coo; these letters have, in these two words, every property of a pure vowel, but when found in food, mood, &c., and in the word too, pronounced like the adjective two: here the oo has a squeezed sound, occasioned by contracting the mouth, so as to make the lips nearly touch each other; and this makes it, like the i and u, not so much a double vowel as a sound between a vowel and a consonant.

Classification of Vowels and Consonants.

Vowels and consonants being thus defined, it will be necessary, in the next place, to arrange them into such classes as their similarities and specific differences seem to require.

Letters, therefore, are naturally divisible into vowels and consonants.

The vowels are, a, e, i, o, u, and y and w when ending a syllable.

The consonants are, b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, z, and y and w when beginning a syllable.

The vowels may be subdivided into such as are simple and pure, and into such as are compound and impure. The simple or pure vowels are such as require only one conformation of the organs to form them, and no motion in the organs while forming.

The compound or impure vowels are such as require more than one conformation of the organs to form them, and a motion in the organs while forming. These observations premised, we may call the following scheme

An Analogical Table of the Vowels.

Diphthongs and Triphthongs enumerated.

Two vowels forming but one syllable are generally called a diphthong, and three a triphthong: these are the following:

ae Caesar,	oa coat,
ai aim,	oe œconomy,
ao gaol,	oi voice,
au taught,	oo moon,
aw law,	ou found,

ia poniard,	ieu adieu,
ie friend,	iew view,
io passion,	oeu manœuvre.

Consonants enumerated and distinguished into Classes.

The consonants are divisible into mutes, semi-vowels, and liquids.

The mutes are such as emit no sound without a vowel, as b, p, t, d, k, and c and g hard.

The semi-vowels are such as emit a sound without the concurrence of a vowel, as f, v, s, z, x, g soft or j.

The liquids are such as flow into, or unite easily with the mutes, as l, m, n, r.

But, besides these, there is another classification of the consonants, of great importance to a just idea of the nature of the letters, and that is, into such as are sharp or flat, and simple or aspirated.

The sharp consonants are, p, f, t, s, k, c hard.

The flat consonants are, b, v, d, z, g hard.

The simple consonants are those which have always the sound of one letter unmixed with others, as b, p, f, v, k, g hard, and g soft, or j.

The mixed or aspirated consonants are those which have sometimes a hiss or aspiration joined with them, which mingles with the letter, and alters its sound, as t in motion, d in soldier, s in mission, and z in azure.

There is another distinction of consonants, arising either from the seat of their formation or from those organs which are chiefly employed in forming them. The best distinction of this kind seems to be that which divides them into labials, dentals, gutturals, and nasals.

The labials are, b, p, f, v. The dentals are, t, d, s, z, and soft g or j. The gutturals are, k, q, c hard, and g hard. The nasals are, m, n, and ng.

These several properties of the consonants may be exhibited at one view in the following table, which may be called

An Analogical Table of the Consonants.

Mute dentals	{ sharp t , tat flat d , dad	aspirated { etch , edge, or j } dento-nasal liquid n .

Dento-guttural or nasal ng , hang .

Vowels and consonants being thus defined and arranged, we shall show the organic formation of each letter.

Organic Formation of the Vowels.

It will be necessary to observe that there are three long sounds of the letter a, which are formed by a greater or less expansion of the internal parts of the mouth.

The German a, heard in ball, wall, &c. is formed by a strong and grave expression of the breath through the mouth, which is open nearly in a circular form, while the tongue, contracting itself to the root, as if to make way for the sound, almost rests upon the under jaw.

The Italian a, heard in fa-ther, closes the mouth a little more than the German a; and by raising the lower jaw, widening the tongue, and advancing it a little nearer to the lips, renders its sound less hollow and deep.

The slender a, or that heard in lane, is formed in the mouth still higher than the last; and in pronouncing it the lips, as if to give it a slender sound, dilate their aperture horizontally; while the tongue, to assist this narrow emission of breath, widens itself to the cheeks, raises itself nearer the palate, and by these means a less hollow sound than either of the former is produced.

The e in e-qual is formed by dilating the tongue a little more, and advancing it nearer to the palate and the lips, which produces the slenderest vowel in the language; for the tongue is, in the formation of this letter, as close to the palate as possible, without touching it; as the moment the tongue touches the palate, the squeezed sound of ee in thee and meet is formed, which, by its description, must partake of the sound of the consonant y.

The i in i-dol is formed by uniting the sound of the Italian a in fa-ther and the e in e-qual, and pronouncing them as closely together as possible.

The o in o-pen is formed by nearly the same position of the organs as the a in wa-ter; but the tongue is advanced a little more into the middle of the mouth, the lips are protruded, and form a round aperture like the form of the letter, and the voice is not so deep in the mouth as when a is formed, but advances to the middle or hollow of the mouth.

The u in u-nit is formed by uniting the squeezed sound ee to a simple vowel sound, heard in too and coo; the oo in these words is formed by protruding the lips a little more than in o, forming a smaller aperture with them, and, instead of swelling the voice in the middle of the mouth, bringing it as forward as possible to the lips.

Y final in try is formed like i: and w final in now like the oo, which has just been described.

In this view of the organic formation of the vowels we find that a, e, and o, are the only simple or pure vowels; that i is a diphthong, and that u is a semi-consonant. If we were inclined to contrive a scale for measuring the breadth or narrowness, or, as others term it, the openness or closeness of the vowels, we might begin with e open, as Mr. Elphinston calls it, and which he announces to be the closest of all the vocal powers. In the pronunciation of this letter we find the aperture of the mouth extended on each side; the lips almost closed, and the sound issuing horizontally. The slender a in waste opens the mouth a little wider. The a in fa-ther opens the mouth still more without contracting the corners. The German a, heard in wall, not only opens the mouth wider than the former a, but contracts the corners of the mouth so as to make the aperture approach nearer to a circle, while the o opens the mouth still more, and contracts the corners so as to make it the os rotundum, a picture of the letter it sounds. If therefore the other vowels were, like o, to take their forms from the aperture of the mouth in pronouncing them, the German a ought necessarily to have a figure as nearly approaching the o in form as it does in sound; that is, it ought to have that elliptical form which approaches nearest to the circle; as the a of the Italians, and that of the English in fa-ther, ought to form ovals, in exact proportion to the breadth of their sounds; the English a in waste ought to have a narrower oval; the e in the ought to have the curve of a parabola, and the squeezed sound of ee in seen a right line; or, to reduce these lines to solids, the o would be a perfect globe, the German a an oblate spheroid like the figure of the earth, the Italian a like an egg, the English slender a a Dutch skittle, the e a rolling-pin, and the double e a cylinder.

Organic Formation of the Consonants.

The best method of showing the organic formation of the consonants will be to class them into such pairs as they naturally fall into, and then, by describing one, we shall nearly describe its fellow; by which means the labour will be lessened, and the nature of the consonants better perceived. The consonants that fall into pairs are the following;

p f t s sh th h ch—chair.
b v d z zh dh g j—jail.

Holder, who wrote the most elaborately and philosophically upon this subject, tells us, in his Elements of Speech, that when we only whisper we cannot distinguish the first rank of these letters from the second. It is certain the difference between them is very nice; the upper letters seeming to have only a smarter, brisker, appulse of the organs than the lower; which may not improperly be distinguished by sharp and flat. The most marking distinction between them will be found to be a sort of guttural murmur, which precedes the latter letters when we wish to pronounce them forcibly, but not the former. Thus if we close the lips, and put the fingers on them to keep them shut, and strive to pronounce the p, no sound at all will be heard; but in striving to pronounce the b we shall find a murmuring sound from the throat, which seems the commencement of the letter; and if we do but stop the breath by the appulse of the organs, in order to pronounce with greater force, the same may be observed of the rest of the letters.

This difference in the formation of these consonants may be more distinctly perceived in the s and z than in any other of the letters; the former is sounded by the simple issue of the breath between the teeth, without any vibration of it in the throat, and may be called a hissing sound; while the latter cannot be formed without generating a sound in the throat, which may be called a vocal sound. The upper rank of letters, therefore, may be called breathing consonants; and the lower vocal ones.

These observations premised, we may proceed to describe the organic formation of each letter.

P and B are formed by closing the lips till the breath is collected, and then letting it issue by forming the vowel e.

F and V are formed by pressing the upper teeth upon the under lip, and sounding the vowel e before the former and after the latter of these letters.

T and D are formed by pressing the tip of the tongue to the gums of the upper teeth, and then separating them, by pronouncing the vowel e.

S and Z are formed by placing the tongue in the same position as in T and D, but not so close to the gums as to stop the breath, a space is left between the tongue and the palate for the breath to issue, which forms the hissing and buzzing sound of these letters.

SH heard in mission, and zh in evasion, are formed in the same seat of sound as s and z; but in the former the tongue is drawn a little inwards, and at a somewhat greater distance from the palate, which occasions a fuller effusion of breath from the hollow of the mouth than in the latter, which are formed nearer to the teeth.

TH in think, and the same letters in that, are formed by protruding the tongue between the fore teeth, pressing it against the upper teeth, and at the same time endeavouring to sound s or z; the former letter to sound th in think, and the latter to sound th in that.

K and G hard are formed by pressing the middle of the tongue to the roof of the mouth near the throat, and separating them a little smartly to form the first, and more gently to form the last of these letters.

CH in chair, and J in jail, are formed by pressing t to sh, and d to zh.

M is formed by closing the lips, as in P and B, and letting the voice issue by the nose.

N is formed by resting the tongue in the same position as in T or D, and breathing through the nose, with the mouth open.

L is formed by nearly the same position of the organs as t and d, but more with the tip of the tongue, which is brought a little forward to the teeth, while the breath issues from the mouth.

R is formed by placing the tongue nearly in the position of t, but at such a distance from the palate as suffers it to jar against it when the breath is propelled from the throat to the mouth.

NG in ring, sing, &c. is formed in the same seat of sound as hard g; but while the middle of the tongue presses the roof of the mouth, as in G, the voice passes principally through the nose, as in N.

Y consonant is formed by placing the organs in the position of e, and squeezing the tongue against the roof of the mouth, which produces ee, which is equivalent to initial y.

W consonant is formed by placing the organs in the position of oo, described under u, and closing the lips a little more, in order to propel the breath upon the succeeding vowel which it articulates.

In this sketch of the formation and distribution of the consonants, it is curious to observe on how few radical principles the almost infinite variety of combination in language depends. It is with some degree of wonder we perceive that the slightest aspiration, the almost insensible inflection of nearly similar sounds, often generate the most different and opposite meanings. In this view of nature, as in every other, we find uniformity and variety very conspicuous. The single flat, at first impressed on the chaos, seems to operate on languages; which, from the simplicity and paucity of their principles, and the extent and power of their combinations, prove the goodness, wisdom, and omnipotence of their origin.

This analogical association of sounds is not only curious, but useful: it gives us a comprehensive view of the powers of the letters; and, from the small number that are radically different, enables us to see the rules on which their varieties depend: it discovers to us the genius and propensities of several languages and dialects, and, when authority is silent, enables us to decide agreeably to analogy.

Of the Quantity and Quality of the Vowels.

The first distinction of sound that seems to obtrude itself upon us when we utter the vowels is a long and a short sound, according to the greater or less duration of time taken up in pronouncing them. This distinction is so obvious as to have been adopted in all languages, and is that to which we annex clearer ideas than to any other; and though the short sounds of some vowels have not in our language been classed with sufficient accuracy with their parent long ones, yet this has bred but little confusion, as vowels long and short are always sufficiently distinguishable; and the nice appropriation of short sounds to their specific long ones is not necessary to our conveying what sound we mean, when the letter to which we apply these sounds is known, and its power agreed upon.

The next distinction of vowels into their specific sounds, which seems to be the most generally adopted, is that which arises from the different apertures of the mouth in forming them. It is certainly very natural, when we have so many more simple sounds than we have characters by which to express them, to distinguish them by that which seems their organic definition; and we accordingly find vowels denominated by the French ouvert and fermé; by the Italians aperto and chiuso; and by the English open and shut.

But whatever propriety there may be in the use of these terms in other languages, it is certain they must be used with caution in English, for fear of confounding them with long and short. Dr. Johnson and other grammarians call the a in father the open a; which may, indeed, distinguish it from the slender a in paper; but not from the broad a in water which is still more open. Each of these letters has a short sound, which may be called a shut sound; but the long sounds cannot be so properly denominated open as more or less broad; that is, the a in paper the slender sound; the a in father the broadish or middle sound; and the a in water the broad sound. The same may be observed of the o. This letter has three long sounds, heard in move, note, nor; which graduate from slender to broadish, and broad like the a. The i also in mine may be called the broad i, and that in machine the slender i; though each of them is equally long; and though these vowels that are long may be said to be more or less open according to the different apertures of the mouth in forming them, yet the short vowels cannot be said to be more or less shut: for as short always implies shut (except in verse) though long does not always imply open, we must be careful not to confound long and open, and close and shut, when we speak of the quantity and quality of the vowels. The truth of it is, all vowels either terminate a syllable, or are united with a consonant. In the first case, if the accent be on the syllable, the vowel is long, though it may not be open: in the second case, where a syllable is terminated by a consonant, except that consonant be r, whether the accent be on the syllable or not, the vowel has its short sound, which, compared with its long one, may be called shut: but as no vowel can be said to be shut that is not joined to a consonant, all vowels that end syllables may be said to be open, whether the accent be on them or not.

But though the terms long and short, as applied to vowels, are pretty generally understood, an accurate ear will easily perceive that these terms do not always mean the long and short sounds of the respective vowels to which they are applied; for if we choose to be directed by the ear in denominating vowels long or short, we must certainly give these appellations to those sounds only which have exactly the same radical tone, and differ only in the long or short emission of that tone. Thus measuring the sounds of the vowels by this scale, we shall find that the long i and y have no short sounds but such as seem essentially distinct from their long ones; and that the short sound of these vowels is no other than the short sound of e, which is the latter letter in the composition of these diphthongs.

The same want of correspondence in classing the long and short vowels we find in a, e, o, and u; for as the e in theme does not find its short sound in the same letter as them, but in the i in him; so the e in them must descend a step lower into the province of a for its long sound in tame. The a in carry is not the short sound of the a in care, but of that in car, father, &c. as the short broad sound of the a in want is the true abbreviation of that in wall. The sound of o in don, gone, &c. is exactly correspondent to the a in swan, and finds its long sound in the a in wall, or the diphthong aw in dawn, lawn, &c.: while the short sound of the o in tone is nearly that of the same letter in ton (a weight), and corresponding with what is generally called the short u in tun, gun, &c. as the long sound of u in pule must find its short sound in the u in pull, bull, &c.: for this vowel, like the i and y, being a diphthong, its short sound is formed from the latter part of the letter, equivalent to double o; as the word pule, if spelled according to the sound, might be written peole.

Of the Influence of Accents on the Sounds of the Letters.

It may be first observed, that the exertion of the organs of speech necessary to produce the accent, or stress, has an obvious tendency to preserve the letters in their pure and uniform sound, while the relaxation or feebleness which succeeds the accent as naturally suffers the letters to slide into a somewhat different sound, a little easier to the organs of pronunciation. Thus the first a in cabbage is pronounced distinctly with the true sound of that letter, while the second a goes into an obscure sound bordering on the i short, the slenderest of all sounds; so that cabbage and village have the a in the last syllable scarcely distinguishable from the e and i in the last syllables of college and vestige.

In the same manner, the a, e, i, o, and y, coming before r in a final unaccented syllable, go into an obscure sound so nearly approaching to the short u, that if the accent were carefully kept upon the first syllables of liar, liar, elixir, mayor, martyr, &c. these words, without any perceptible change in the sound of their last syllables, might all be written and pronounced liur, liur, elixur, mayur, matur, &c.

The consonants also are no less altered in their sound by the position of the accent than the vowels. The k and s in the composition of x, when the accent is on them, in exercise, execute, &c. preserve their strong pure sound; but when the accent is on the second syllable, in exact, exonerate, &c. these letters slide into the duller and weaker sounds of g and z, which are easier to the organs of pronunciation. Hence not only the soft c and the s go into sh, but even the t before a diphthong slides into the same letters when the stress is on the preceding syllable. Thus in society and satiety the c and t preserve their pure sound, because the syllables ci and ti have the accent on them: but in social and satiolate these syllables come after the stress, and, from the feebleness of their situation, naturally fall into the shorter and easier sound, as if written soshial and sa-shiate.

Of the Nature of Accent.

Accent, in its very nature, implies a comparison with other syllables less forcible; hence we may conclude that monosyllables, properly speaking, have no accent: when they are combined with other monosyllables, and form a phrase, the stress which is laid upon one, in preference to others, is called emphasis. As emphasis evidently points out the most significant word in a sentence, so, where other reasons do not forbid, the accent always dwells with greatest force on that part of the word which, from its importance, the hearer has always the greatest occasion to observe; and this is necessarily the root or body of the word. But as harmony of termination frequently attracts the accent from the root to the branches of words, so the first and most natural law of accentuation seems to operate less in fixing the stress than any of the other. Our own Saxon terminations, indeed, with perfect uniformity, leave the principal part of the word in quiet possession of what seems its lawful property; but Latin and Greek terminations, of which our language is full, assume a right of preserving their original accent, and subjecting many of the words they bestow upon us to their own classical laws.

Accent, therefore, seems to be regulated, in a great measure, by etymology. In words from the Saxon the accent is generally on the root; in words from the learned languages it is generally on the termination; and if to these we add the different accent we lay on some words, to distinguish them from others, we seem to have the three great principles of accentuation; namely, the radical, the terminational, and the distinctive.

Radical Accent.—As our language borrows so largely from the learned languages, it is not wonderful that its pronunciation should be in some measure influenced by them. The rule for placing the Greek accent was, indeed, essentially different from that of the Latin; but words from the Greek, coming to us through the Latin, are often so much latinized as to lose their original accent, and to fall into that of the Latin; and it is the Latin accent which we must chiefly regard as that which influences our own.

The first general rule that may be laid down is, that when words come to us whole from the Greek or Latin, the same accent ought to be preserved as in the original: thus horizon, sonorous, decorum, dictator, gladiator, mediator, delator, spectator, adulator, &c. preserve the penultimate accent of the original; and yet the antepenultimate tendency of our language has placed the accent on the first syllable of orator, senator, auditor, cicatrix, plethora, &c. in opposition to the Latin pronunciation of these words, and would have infallibly done the same by abdomen, bitumen, and acumen, if the learned had not stepped in, to rescue these classical words from the invasion of the Gothic accent, and to preserve the stress inviolably on the second syllable; nor has even the interposition of two consonants been always able to keep the accent from mounting up to the antepenultimate syllable, as we may see in minister, sinister, character, &c.;

and this may be said to be the favourite accent of our language.

But, notwithstanding this prevalence of the antepenultimate accent, the general rule still holds good; and more particularly in words a little removed from common usage, such as terms in the arts and sciences; these are generally of Greek original; but, coming to us through the Latin, most commonly contract the Latin accent when adopted into our language.

Terminational Accent.—To form an idea of the influence of termination upon accent, it will be sufficient to observe, that words which have ei, ia, ie, io, cou, in their termination, always have the accent on the preceding syllable; thus atheist, alien, regalia, ambrosia, &c. the numerous terminations in ion, ian, &c. as gradation, promotion, confusion, logician, physician, &c. those in ious, as harmonious, abstemious, &c. those in cous, as outrageous, advantageous, &c. These may not improperly be styled semi-consonant diphthongs.

The only exceptions to this rule are one word in iac, as elegiac, which has the accent on the i, and the following words in iacal, as prosodiacal, cardiacal, heliacal, genethliacal, maniacal, demoniacal, ammoniacal, theriacal, paradisiacal, aphrodisiacal, and hypochondriacal; all which have the accent on the antepenultimate i, and that long and open, as in idle, title, &c.

Nothing can be more uniform than the position of the accent in words of these terminations; and, with very few exceptions, the quantity of the accented vowel is as regular as the accent; for when these terminations are preceded by a single consonant, every accented vowel is long, except i; which, in this situation, is as uniformly short.

Enclitical Accent.—I have ventured to give the name of enclitical to the accent of certain words, whose terminations are formed of such words as seem to lose their own accent, and throw it back on the last syllable of the word with which they coalesce, such as theology, orthography, &c. The readiness with which these words take the antepenultimate accent, the agreeable flow of sound to the ear, and the unity it preserves in the sense, are sufficient proofs of the propriety of placing the accent on this syllable, if custom were ambiguous.

Secondary Accent.—Hitherto we have considered that accent only which necessarily distinguishes one syllable in a word from the rest; and which, with very little diversity, is adopted by all who speak the English language.

The secondary accent is that stress we may occasionally place upon another syllable, besides that which has the principal accent, in order to pronounce every part of the word more distinctly, forcibly, and harmoniously. Thus this accent may be placed on the first syllable of conversation, commendation, &c.

Quantity.—In treating this part of pronunciation, it will not be necessary to enter into the nature of that quantity which constitutes poetry; the quantity here considered will be that which relates to words taken singly; and this is nothing more than the length or shortness of the vowels, either as they stand alone, or as they are different combined with vowels or consonants.

Syllabication.—Dividing words into syllables is a very different operation, according to the different ends proposed by it. The object of syllabication may be, either to enable children to discover the sound of words they are unacquainted with, or to show the etymology of a word, or to exhibit the exact pronunciation of it.

When a child has made certain advances in reading, but is ignorant of the sound of many of the longer words, it may not be improper to lay down the common general rule to him, that a consonant between two vowels must go to the latter; and that two consonants coming together must be divided. Farther than this it would be absurd to go with a child; for telling him that compounds must be divided into their simples, and that such consonants as may begin a word may begin a syllable, requires a previous knowledge of words, which children cannot be supposed to have; and which, if they have, makes the division of words into syllables unnecessary. Children, therefore, may be very usefully taught the general rule above mentioned, as, in many cases, it will lead them to the exact sound of the word, as in pro-vid-ed; and in others it will enable them to give a good guess at it, as in de-li-cate; and this is all that can be expected: for when we are to form an unknown compound sound out of several known simple sounds (which is the case with children, when we wish them to find out the sound of a word by spelling it), this, I say, is the only method that can be taken.

But an etymological division of words is a different operation: it is the division of a person acquainted with the whole word, and who wishes to convey, by this division, a knowledge of its constituent parts, as orthography, theo-logy, &c.

In the same manner, a person who is pre-acquainted with the whole compound sound of a word, and wants to convey the sound of each part to one unacquainted with it, must divide it into such partial sounds as, when put together again, will exactly form the whole, as or-thog-ra-phy, the-o-lo-gy, &c. This is the method adopted by those who would convey the whole sound, by giving distinctly every part; and, when this is the object of syllabication, Dr. Lowth's rule is certainly to be followed. "The best and easiest rule," says the learned bishop, "for dividing the syllables in spelling, is to divide them as they are naturally divided in a right pronunciation, without regard to the derivation of words, or the possible combination of consonants at the beginning of a syllable."

RULES TO BE OBSERVED BY THE NATIVES OF IRELAND,

IN ORDER TO OBTAIN A JUST PRONUNCIATION OF ENGLISH.

As Mr. Sheridan was a native of Ireland, and had the best opportunities of understanding those peculiarities of pronunciation which obtain there, I shall extract his observations on that subject as the best general direction, and add a few of my own, by way of supplement, which I hope will render this article of instruction still more complete.

The reader will be pleased to take notice, that as I have made a different arrangement of the vowels, and adopted a notation different from that of Mr. Sheridan, I am obliged to make use of different figures to mark the vowels, but still such as perfectly correspond to his.

"The chief mistakes made by the Irish in pronouncing English, lie for the most part in the sounds of the two first vowels, a and e: the former being generally sounded â by the Irish, as in the word bâr, in most words where it is pronounced â, as in dây, by the English. Thus, the Irish say, pâtron, mâtron, the vowel â having the same sound as in the word fâther; while the English pronounce them as if written paytron, maytron. The following rule strictly attended to, will rectify this mistake through the whole language.

"When the vowel a finishes a syllable, and has the accent on it, it is invariably pronounced â, as in dây, by the English. To this rule there are but three exceptions in the whole language, to be found in the words fâther, pâpi, mammâ. The Irish may think also the word râther an exception, as well as fâther: and so it would appear to be in their manner of pronouncing it, râ-ther, laying the accent on the vowel a; but in the English pronunciation the consonant th is taken into the first syllable, as rath'-er, which makes the difference.

"Whenever a consonant follows the vowel a in the same syllable, and the accent is on the consonant, the vowel a has always its fourth sound, as hât, mân; as also the same sound lengthened when it precedes the letter r, as fâr, bâr, though the accent be on the vowel; as likewise when it precedes lm, as bâlm, pâlm. The Irish, ignorant of this latter exception, pronounce all words of that structure, as if they were written bawm, psawm, quawm, cawm, &c. In the third sound of a, marked by different combinations of vowels or consonants, such as au, in Paul; aw, in law; all, in call; ald, in bald; alk, in talk, &c.; the Irish make no mistake, except in that of lm, as before mentioned.

"The second vowel, e, is for the most part sounded ee by the English, when the accent is upon it; whilst the Irish in most words give it the sound of slender â, as in hâte. This sound of â [ee] is marked by different combinations of vowels, such as ea, ei, e final mute, ee, and ie. In the two last combinations of ee and ie, the Irish never mistake; such as in meet, seem, field, believe, &c.; but in all the others, they almost universally change the sound of â into â. Thus, in the combination ea, they pronounce the words tea, sea, please, as if they were spelt tay, say, plays; instead of tee, see, please. The English constantly give this sound to ea whenever the accent is on the vowel e, except in the following words: great, a pear, a bear, to bear, to forbear, to swear, to tear, to wear. In all which the e has the sound of â in hite. For want of knowing these exceptions, the gentlemen of Ireland, after some time of residence in London, are apt to fall into the general rule, and pronounce these words as if spelt greet, beer, sweer, &c.

"Ei is also sounded ee by the English, and as â by the Irish; thus, the words deceit, receive, are pronounced by them as if written desate, resave. Ei is always sounded ee, except when a g follows it, as in the words reign, feign, deign, &c. as also in the words rein (of a bridle), rein-deer, vein, drein, veil, heir, which are pronounced like rain, vain, drain, vail, air.

"The final mute e makes the preceding e in the same syllable, when accented, have the sound of ee, as in the words suprême, sincère, replète. This rule is almost universally broken through by the Irish, who pronounce all such words as if written suprême, sinsère, replète, &c. There are but two exceptions to this rule in the English pronunciation, which are the words there, where.

"In the way of marking this sound, by a double e, as thus [ee] as the Irish never make any mistakes, the best method for all who want to acquire the right pronunciation of these several combinations is, to suppose that ea, ei, and e, attended by a final mute e, are all spelt with a double e.

"Ey is always sounded like â by the English, when the accent is upon it; as in the words prey, convey, pronounced pray, convay. To this there are but two exceptions, in the words kây and lây, sounded kee, lee. The Irish, in attempting to pronounce like the English, often give the same sound to ey, as usually belongs to ei; thus, for prey, convey, they say, pree, convee.

"A strict observation of these few rules, with a due attention to the very few exceptions enumerated above, will enable the well educated natives of Ireland to pronounce their words exactly in the same way as the more polished part of the inhabitants of England do, so far as the vowels are concerned. The diphthongs they commit no fault in, except in the sound of i, which has been already taken notice of in the Grammar*: where, likewise, the only difference in pronouncing any of the consonants has been pointed out; which is, the thickening the sound of d and t, in certain situations; and an easy method proposed of correcting this habit†.

* "Vide page 11, where the true manner of pronouncing the diphthong i is pointed out; the Irish pronouncing it much in the same manner as the French."

† "The letter d has always the same sound by those who pronounce English well: but the provincials, particularly the Irish, Scotch, and Welsh, in many words thicken the sound by a mixture of breath. Thus, though they sound the d right in the positive loud and broad, in the comparative degree they thicken it by an aspiration, and sound it as if it were written loudher, broadher. This vicious pronunciation is produced by pushing the tongue forward so as to touch the teeth in forming that sound: and the way to cure it is easy; for as they can pronounce the d

"In order to complete the whole, I shall now give a list of such detached words as do not come under any of the above rules, and are pronounced differently in Ireland from what they are in England:—

properly in the word loud, let them rest a little upon that syllable, keeping the tongue in the position of forming d, and then let them separate it from the upper gum without pushing it forward, and the sound der will be produced of course: for the organ being left in the position of sounding d at the end of the syllable loud, is necessarily in the position of forming the same d in uttering the last syllable, unless it makes a new movement, as in the case of protruding it so as to touch the teeth. This letter is sometimes, though not often, quiescent, as in the words handkerchief, handsome, handsel.

"In pronouncing the letter t, the Irish and other provincials thicken the sound, as was before mentioned with regard to the d; for better, they say bettier; for utter, utther; and so on in all words of that structure. This faulty manner arises from the same cause that was mentioned as affecting the sound of d; I mean the protruding of the tongue so as to touch the teeth, and is curable only in the same way."

"These, after the closest attention, are all the words, not included in the rules before laid down, that I have been able to collect, which the well educated natives of Ireland differ from those of England."

I shall make no observations on the accuracy of this list, but desire my reader to observe, that the strongest characteristics of the pronunciation of Ireland is the rough or rring pronunciation of the letter R, and the aspiration or rough breathing before all the accented vowels. (For the true sound of R, see the subjoined note *). And for the

* There is a distinction in the sound of this letter, scarcely ever noticed by any of our writers on the subject, which is, in my opinion, of no small importance; and that is, the rough and smooth r. Ben Jonson, in his Grammar, says it is sounded firm in the beginning of words, and more liquid in the middle and ends, as in rarer, riper; and so in the Latin. The rough r is formed by jarring the tip of the tongue against the roof of the mouth near the fore teeth: the smooth r is a vibration of the lower part of the tongue near the root, against the inward region of the palate, near the entrance of the throat. This latter r is that which marks the pronunciation of England, and the former that of Ireland. In England, and particularly in London, the r in lard, hard, card, regard, &c. is pronounced so much in the throat as to be little more than rough breathing or aspiration of the vowels, the pupil should be told not to bring the voice suddenly from the breast, but to speak, as it were, from the mouth only.

It may be observed too, that the natives of Ireland pronounce rm at the end of a word so distinctly as to form two separate syllables. Thus storm and farm seem sounded by them as if written stao-rum, fa-rum; while the English sound the r so soft and so close to the m, that it seems pronounced nearly as if written stawm, faam.

Nearly the same observations are applicable to lm. When these letters end a word, they are, in Ireland, pronounced at such a distance, that helm and realm sound as if written hel-um and rel-um; but in England the l and m are pronounced as close as possible, and so as to form but one syllable. To remedy this, it will be necessary for the pupil to make a collection of words terminating with these consonants, and to practise them over till a true pronunciation is acquired.

the middle or Italian a, lengthened into laad, baad, caad, regaad; while in Ireland the r, in these words, is pronounced with so strong a jar of the tongue against the forepart of the palate, and accompanied with such an aspiration, or strong breathing, at the beginning of the letter, as to produce that harshness we call the Irish accent. But if this letter is too forcibly pronounced in Ireland, it is often too feebly sounded in England, and particularly in London, where it is sometimes entirely sunk; and it may, perhaps, be worthy of observation, that, provided we avoid a too forcible pronunciation of the r, when it ends a word, or is followed by a consonant in the same syllable, we may give as much force as we please to this letter, at the beginning of a word, without producing any harshness to the ear: thus Rome, river, rage, may have the r as forcible as in Ireland; but bar, bard, card, hard, &c. must have it nearly as in London.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED BY THE NATIVES OF SCOTLAND, FOR ATTAINING A JUST PRONUNCIATION OF ENGLISH.

THAT pronunciation which distinguishes the inhabitants of Scotland is of a very different kind from that of Ireland, and may be divided into the quantity, quality, and accentuation of the vowels. With respect to quantity, it may be observed, that the Scotch pronounce almost all their accented vowels long. Thus, if I mistake not, they would pronounce habit, key-bit; tepid, tee-pid; sinner, see-ner; conscious, cone-shus; and subject, soob-ject; it is not pretended, however, that

* That this is the general mode of pronouncing these words in Scotland, is indubitable: and it is highly probable that the Scotch have preserved the old English pronunciation, from which the English themselves have insensibly departed. Dr. Hickeys observed long ago, that the Scots Saxonised in their language much more than the English; and it is scarcely to be doubted that a every accented vowel is so pronounced, but that such a pronunciation is very general, and particularly of the i. This vowel is short in English pronunciation, where the other vowels are long; thus evasion, adhesion, emotion, confusion, have the a, e, o, and u, long; and in these instances the Scotch would pronounce them like the English: but in vision, decision, &c. where the English pronounce the i short, the Scotch lengthen this letter by pronouncing it like ee, situation nearer to the Continent, and a greater commercial intercourse with other nations, made the English admit of numberless changes which never extended to Scotland. About the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when the Greek and Latin languages were cultivated, and the pedantry of showing an acquaintance with them became fashionable, it is not improbable that an alteration in the

as if the words were written vee-sion, dece-sion, &c.; and this peculiarity is universal. The best way, therefore, to correct this, will be to make a collection of the most usual words which have the vowel short, and to pronounce them daily till a habit is formed.

With respect to the quality of the vowels, it may be observed that the inhabitants of Scotland are apt to pronounce the a like aw, where the English give it the slender sound: thus Satan is pronounced Sawtan, and fatal, fawtal. It may be remarked too, that the Scotch give this sound to the a preceded by w, according to the general rule, without attending to the exceptions; and thus, instead of making wax, waft, and twang, rhyme with tax, shaft, and hang, they pronounce them so as to rhyme with box, soft, and song. The short e in bed, fed, red, &c. borders too much upon the English sound of a in bad, lad, mad, &c.; and the short i in bid, lid, rid, too much on the English sound of e in bed, led, red. To correct this error, it would be useful to collect the long and short sounds of these vowels, and to pronounce the long ones first, and to shorten them by degrees till they are perfectly short; at the same time preserving the radical sound of the vowel in both. Thus the correspondent long sounds to the e in bed, fed, red, are bade, fade, rade; and that of the short i in bid, lid, rid, are bead, lead, reed; and the former of these classes will naturally lead the ear to the true sound of the latter, the only difference lying in the quantity. The short o in not, lodge, got, &c. is apt to slide into the short u, as if the words were written nut, ludge, gut, &c. To rectify this, it should be remembered, that this o is the short sound of aw, and ought to have the radical sound of the deep a in ball. Thus the radical sound corresponding to the o in not, col, sol, is found in naught, caught, sought, &c.; and these long sounds, like the former, should be abbreviated into the short ones. But what will tend greatly to clear the difficulty will be, to remember that only those words which are collected in the note below*, have the o sounded like short u when quantity of many words took place; for, as in Latin, almost every vowel before a single consonant is short, so in English almost every vowel in the same situation was supposed to be long, or our ancestors would not have doubled the consonant in the participles of verbs, to prevent the preceding vowel from lengthening. But when once this affectation of Latinity was adopted, it is no wonder it should extend beyond its principles, and shorten several vowels in English, because they were short in the original Latin; and in this manner, perhaps, might the diversity between the quantity of the English and the Scotch pronunciation arise.

the accent is upon it: and with respect to u in bull, full, pull, &c. it may be observed, that the pronunciation peculiar to the English is only found in the words enumerated in the note f.

In addition to what has been said, it may be observed, that oo in food, mood, soon, &c. which ought always to have a long sound, is generally shortened in Scotland to that middle sound of the u in bull: and it must be remembered, that wool, wood, good, hood, stood, foot, are the only words where this sound of oo ought to take place.

The accentuation, both in Scotland and Ireland (if by accentuation we mean the stress, and not the kind of stress), is so much the same as that of England, that I cannot recollect many words in which they differ. Indeed, if it were not so, the versification of each country would be different; for as English verse is formed by accent or stress, if this accent or stress were upon different syllables in different countries, what is verse in England would not be verse in Scotland or Ireland; and this sufficiently shows how very indefinitely the word accent is generally used.

Mr. Elphinston, who must be allowed to be a competent judge in this case, tells us, that in Scotland they pronounce silence, bias, canvass, sentence, triumph, comfort, solace, construe, rescue, respice, govern, harass, ransack, cancel, with the accent on the last syllable instead of the first. To this list may be added the word menace, which they pronounce as if written menass; and though they place the accent on the last syllable of canal, like the English, they broaden the a in the last syllable, as if the word were spelt canawl. It may be farther observed, that they place an accent on the comparative adverb as, in the phrases as much, as little, as many, as great, &c. while the English, except in some very particular emphatical cases, lay no stress on this word, but pronounce these phrases like words of two or three syllables without any accent on the first.

But besides the mispronunciation of single words, there is a tone of voice with which these words are accompanied, that distinguishes a native of Ireland or Scotland as much as an improper sound of the letters. This is vulgarly, and, if it does not mean stress only, but the kind of stress, I think, not improperly, called the accent[†]. For though there is an asperity in the Irish dialect, and a drawl in the Scotch, independent of the slides or inflections they make use of, yet it may with confidence be affirmed, that much of the peculiarity which distinguishes these dialects may be reduced to a predominant use of one of these slides. Let any one who has sufficiently studied the speaking voice to distinguish the slides, observe the pronunciation of an Irishman and a Scotchman, who have much of the dialect of their country, and he will find that the former abounds with the falling, and the latter with the rising inflection *; and if this be the case, a teacher, if he understands these slides, ought to direct his instruction so as to remedy the imperfection. But as avoiding the wrong, and seizing the right at the same instant, is perhaps too great a task for human powers, I would advise a native of Ireland, who has much of the accent, to pronounce almost all his words, and end all his sentences with the rising slide; and a Scotchman, in the same manner, to use the falling inflection: this will, in some measure, counteract the natural propensity, and bids fairer for bringing the pupil to that nearly equal mixture of both slides which distinguishes the English speaker, than endeavouring at first to catch the agreeable variety. For this purpose the teacher ought to pronounce all the single words in the lesson with the falling inflection to a Scotchman, and with the rising to an Irishman; and should frequently give the pauses in a sentence the same inflections to each of these pupils, where he would vary them to a native of England. But while the human voice remains unstudied, there is little expectation that this distinction of the slides should be applied to these useful purposes.

Besides a peculiarity of inflection, which I take to be a falling circumflex, directly opposite to that of the Scotch, the Welsh pronounce the sharp consonants and aspirations instead of the flat *. Thus for big they say pick; for blood, plot; and for good, cool. Instead of virtue and vice, they say firtue and fice; instead of zeal and praise, they say seal and prace; instead of these and those, they say thece and thoce; and instead of azure and osier, they say aysher and osher: and for jail, chail. Thus there are nine distinct consonant sounds which, to the Welsh, are entirely useless. To speak with propriety, therefore, the Welsh ought for some time to pronounce the flat consonants and aspirations only; that is, they ought not only to pronounce them where the letters require the flat sound, but even where they require the sharp sound: this will be the best way to acquire a habit; and when this is once done, a distinction will be easily made, and a just pronunciation more readily acquired.

There is scarcely any part of England, remote from the capital, where a different system of pronunciation does not prevail. As in Wales they pronounce the sharp consonants for the flat, so in Somersetshire they pronounce many of the flat instead of the sharp: thus for Somersetshire, they say Zomerzetshire; for father, vather; for think, tnink; and for sure, zhure.

There are dialects peculiar to Cornwall, Lancashire, Yorkshire, and every distant county in England; but as a consideration of these would lead to a detail too minute for the present occasion, I shall conclude these remarks with a few observations on the peculiarities of my countrymen, the Cockneys; who, as they are the models of pronunciation to the distant provinces, ought to be the more scrupulously correct.

FIRST FAULT OF THE LONDONERS.—Pronouncing s indistinctly after st.

The letter s after st, from the very difficulty of its pronunciation, is often sounded inarticulately. The inhabitants of London, of the lowest order, cut the knot, and pronounce it in a distinct syllable, as if e were before it; but this is to be avoided as the greatest blemish in speaking: the three last letters in posts, fists, mists, &c. must all be distinctly heard in one syllable, and without permitting the letters to coalesce. For the acquiring of this sound, it will be proper to select nouns that end in st, or ste; to form them into plurals, and pronounce them forcibly and distinctly every day. The same may be observed of the third person of verbs ending in sts or stes, as persists, wastes, hastes, &c.

SECOND FAULT.—Pronouncing w for v, and inversely.

The pronunciation of v for w, and more frequently of w for v, among the inhabitants of London, and those not always of the lower order, is a blemish of the first magnitude. The difficulty of remedying this defect is the greater, as the cure of one of these mistakes has a tendency to promote the other.

Thus, if you be very careful to make a pupil pronounce veal and vinegar, not as if written weal and winegar, you will find him very apt to pronounce wine and wind, as if written vine and vind. The only method of rectifying this habit seems to be this: Let the pupil select from a Dictionary, not only all the words that begin with v, but as many as he can of those that have this letter in any other part. Let him be told to bite his under lip while he is sounding the v in those words, and to practise this every day till he pronounce the v properly at first sight: then, and not till then, let him pursue the same method with the w; which he must be directed to pronounce by a pouting out of the lips without suffering them to touch the teeth. Thus by giving all the attention to only one of these letters at a time, and fixing by habit the true sound of that, we shall at last find both of them reduced to their proper pronunciation, in a shorter time than by endeavouring to rectify them both at once.

THIRD FAULT.—Not sounding h after w.

The aspirate h is often sunk, particularly in the capital, where we do not find the least distinction of sound between while and wile, whet, and wet, where, and vere, &c. The best method to rectify this, is to collect all the words of this description from a Dictionary, and write them down; and, instead of the wh, to begin them with hoo in a distinct syllable, and so to pronounce them. Thus let while be written and sounded hoo-ile; whet, hoo-et; where, hoo-are; whip, hoo-ip, &c. This is no more, as Dr. Lowth observes,

* Or rather the rising circumflex. For an explanation of this inflection, see Rhetorical Grammar, third edition, page 79.

† See pages vi. and vii.

than placing the aspirate in its true position before the w, as it is in the Saxon, which the words come from; where we may observe, that though we have altered the orthography of our ancestors, we have still preserved their pronunciation.

FOURTH FAULT.—Not sounding h where it ought to be sounded, and inversely.

A still worse habit than the last prevails, chiefly among the people of London, that of sinking the h at the beginning of words where it ought to be sounded, and of sounding it, either where it is not seen, or where it ought to be sunk. Thus we not unfrequently hear, especially among children, heart pronounced art, and arm, harm. This is a vice perfectly similar to that of pronouncing the v for the w, and the w for the v, and requires a similar method to correct it.

As there are so very few words in the language where the initial h is sunk, we may select these from the rest, and, without setting the pupil right when he mispronounces these, or when he prefixes h improperly to other words, we may make him pronounce all the words where h is sounded, till he has almost forgot there are any words pronounced otherwise: then he may go over those words to which he improperly prefixes the h, and those where the h is seen but not sounded, without any danger of an interchange. As these latter words are but few, I shall subjoin a catalogue of them for the use of the learner: Heir, heiness, honest, honesty, honestly, honour, honourable, honourably, hospital, hostler, hour, hourly, humble, humbles, humbly, humour, humorist, humorous, humorously, humorsome: where we may observe, that humour and its compounds not only sink the h, but sound the u like the pronoun you, or the noun yew, as if written yewmour, yewmoursous, &c.

Thus I have endeavoured to correct some of the more glaring errors of my countrymen, who, with all their faults, are still upon the whole the best pronouncers of the English language: for though the pronunciation of London is certainly erroneous in many words, yet, upon being compared with that of any other place, it is undoubtedly the best; that is, not only the best by courtesy, and because it happens to be the pronunciation of the capital, but the best by a better title—that of being more generally received; or, in other words, though the people of London are erroneous in the pronunciation of many words, the inhabitants of every other place are erroneous in many more. Nay, harsh as the sentence may seem, those at a considerable distance from the capital, do not only mispronounce many words taken separately, but they scarcely pronounce, with purity, a single word, syllable, or letter. Thus, if the short sound of the letter u in trunk, sunk, &c. differ from the sound of that letter in the northern parts of England, where they sound it like the u in bull, and hardly as if the words were written troonk, soonk, &c. it necessarily follows that every word where the second sound of that letter occurs must by those provincials be mispronounced.

But though the inhabitants of London have this manifest advantage over all the other inhabitants of the island, they have the disadvantage of being more disgraced by their peculiarities than any other people. The grand difference between the metropolis and the provinces is, that people of education in London are generally free from the vices of the vulgar; but the best educated people in the provinces, if constantly resident there, are sure to be strongly tinctured with the dialect of the country in which they live. Hence it is, that the vulgar pronunciation of London, though not half so erroneous as that of Scotland, Ireland, or any of the provinces, is, to a person of correct taste, a thousand times more offensive and disgusting.

DIRECTIONS TO FOREIGNERS,

IN ORDER TO ATTAIN A KNOWLEDGE OF THE MARKS IN THIS DICTIONARY, AND TO ACQUIRE A RIGHT PRONUNCIATION OF EVERY WORD IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

As the sounds of the vowels are different in different languages, it would be endless to bring parallel sounds from the various languages of Europe; but, as the French is so generally understood upon the Continent, if we can reduce the sounds of the English letters to those of the French, we shall render the pronunciation of our language very generally attainable: and this, it is presumed, will be pretty accurately accomplished by observing the following directions:

A	ei	N	en
B	bi	O	o
C	ci	P	pi
D	di	Q	kiou
E	i	R	arr
F	ef	S	ess
G	dgi	T	ti
H	etch	U	iou
I	ai	V	vi
J	dje	W	doblion
K	que	X	ex
L	ell	Y	ouai
M	em	Z	zedd

The French have all our vowel sounds, and will therefore find the pronunciation of them very easy. The only difficulty they will meet with seems to be i, which, though demonstratively composed of two successive sounds, has passed for a simple vowel with a very competent judge of English pronunciation*. The reason is, these two sounds are pronounced so closely together as to require some attention to discover their component parts: this attention Mr. Sheridan never gave, or he would not have told us, that this diphthong is a compound of our fullest and slenderest sounds i and e; the first made by the largest, and the last by the smallest aperture of the mouth. Now nothing is more certain than the inaccuracy of this definition. The third sound of a, which is perfectly equivalent to the third sound of e, when combined with the first sound of e, must inevitably form the diphthong in boy, joy, &c. and not the diphthongal sound of the vowel i in idle, or the personal pronoun I; this double sound will, upon a close examination, be found to be composed of the Italian a in the last syllable of papa, and the first sound of e, pronounced as closely together as possible*; and for the exactness of this definition, I appeal to every just English ear in the kingdom.

The other diphthongal vowel, u, is composed of the French i, pronounced as closely as possible to their diphthong ou, or the English u and o, perfectly equivalent to the sound the French would give to the letters you, and which is exactly the sound the English give to the plural of the second personal pronoun.

The diphthong oi or oy is composed of the French a and i; thus toy and boy would be exactly expressed to a Frenchman by writing them tai, bai.

The diphthong ou and ow, when sounded like ou, are composed of the French â and the diphthong ou; and the English sounds of thou and now may be expressed to a Frenchman by spelling them thâou and nâou.

W is no more than the French diphthong ou; thus West is equivalent to Ouest, and well to ouâll.

Y is perfectly equivalent to the French letter of that name, and may be supplied by i; thus yoke, you, &c. is expressed by ioke, ion, &c.

J, or I consonant, must be pronounced by prefixing d to the French j; thus jay, joy, &c. sound to a Frenchman as if spelled djé, djâi, &c. If any difficulty be found in forming this combination of sounds, it will be removed by pronouncing the dj, ed, and spelling these words edjé, edjâi, &c.

Ch, in English words not derived from the Greek, Latin, or French, is pronounced as if t were prefixed; thus the sound of chair, cheese, chain, &c. would be understood by a Frenchman if the words were written tshère, tchize, tchéne.

Sh in English is expressed by ch in French; thus shame, share, &c. would be spelled by a Frenchman chème, chère, &c.

The ringing sound ng in long, song, &c. may be perfectly conceived by a pupil who can pronounce the French word encore, as the first syllable of this word is exactly correspondent to the sound in those English words.

But the greatest difficulty every foreigner finds in pronouncing English, is the lisping consonant th. This, it may be observed, has, like the other consonants, a sharp and a flat sound; sharp as in thin, bath; flat as in that, with. To acquire the true pronunciation of this difficult combination, it may be proper to begin with those words where it is initial; and first let the pupil protrude his tongue a little way beyond the teeth, and press it between them as if going to bite the tip of it; while this is doing, if he wishes to pronounce thin, let him hiss as if to sound the letter s; and after the hiss let him draw back his tongue within his teeth, and pronounce the preposition in, and thus will the word thin be perfectly pronounced. If he would pronounce that, let him place the tongue between the teeth as before; and while he is hissing, as if to sound the letter z, let him withdraw his tongue into his mouth, and immediately pronounce the preposition at. To pronounce this combination when final in both, let him pronounce ba, and protrude the tongue beyond the teeth, pressing the tongue with them, and hissing as if to sound s; if he would pronounce with, let him first form wi, put the tongue in the same position as before, and hiss as if to sound z. It will be proper to make the pupil dwell some time with the tongue beyond the teeth in order to form a habit, and to pronounce daily some words out of a Dictionary beginning and ending with these letters.

These directions, it is presumed, if properly attended to, will be sufficient to give such foreigners as understand French, and have not access to a master, a competent knowledge of English pronunciation; but to render the sounds of the vowels marked by figures in this Dictionary still more easily to be comprehended—with those English words which exemplify the sounds of the vowels, I have associated such French words as have vowels exactly corresponding to them, and which immediately convey the true English pronunciation. These should be committed to memory, or written down and held in his hand while the pupil is inspecting the Dictionary.

Perhaps the greatest advantage to foreigners and provincials will be derived from the classification of words of a similar sound, and drawing the line between the general rule and the exception. This has been an arduous task; but it is hoped the benefit arising from it will amply repay it. When the numerous varieties of sounds annexed to vowels, diphthongs, and consonants, lie scattered without bounds, a learner is bewildered and discouraged from attempting to distinguish them; but when they are all classed, arranged, and enumerated, the variety seems less, the number smaller, and the distinction easier. What an inextricable labyrinth do the diphthongs ea and ou form as they lie loose in the language! but classed and arranged as we find them†, the confusion vanishes, they become

* Holder, the most philosophical and accurate investigator of the formation and powers of the letters, says, "Our vulgar i, as in stile, seems to be such a diphthong (or rather syllable, or part of a syllable) composed of a, i, or e, i, and not a simple original vowel."—Elements of Speech, page 95.

Dr. Wallis, speaking of the long English i, says it is sounded "eodem fere modo quo Gallorum ai in vocibus main, manus; pain, penis, &c. Nempe sonum habet compositum ex Gallorum e fœminino et i vel y."—Grammatica Linguae Anglicanae, page 48.

† EA.—The regular sound of this diphthong is that of the first sound of e in here; but its irregular sound of short e is so frequent as to make a catalogue of both necessary; especially for those who are unsettled in the pronunciation of the capital, and wish to practise in order to form a habit.

The first sound of ea is like open e, and is heard in the following words: Afear'd, affair, anneal, appeal, appear, appease, arcad, arrear, beacon, beadle, beadroll, beads, beadsman, beagle, beak, baker, beam, bean, beard, bearded, beast, beat, beaten, beaver, be- much less formidable, and a learner has it in his power, by repeating them daily, to become master of them all in a very little time.

The English accent is often an insurmountable obstacle to foreigners, as the rules for it are so various, and the exceptions so numerous; but let the inspector consult the article Accent, p. ix. x. and he will soon perceive how

OU.—The first or proper sound of this diphthong is composed of the a in ball, and the oo in woo, or rather the u in bull, and is equivalent to the ow in down, frown, &c. This sound is heard in abound, about, account, acousticks, aground, aloud, amount, around, arouse, astound, avouch, bough, bounce, bound, bounty, bounteous, bout, carouse, chouse, cloud, clough, clout, clouterly, compound, couch, couchant, crouch, grouse, deflour, devour, devout, doubt, doubtful,

The second sound is that of short u in bud, and is heard in the following words and their compounds: Adjourn, journey, journal, bourgeois, country, cousin, couple, accouple, double, trouble, courteous, courtesy, courage, encourage, joust, gourmet, housewife, flourish, mounch, nourish, enough, chough, rough, tough, slough (a cast skin), scourge, southerly, southern, southernwood, southward, touch, touchy, young, younger, and youngster; but southern, southerly, and southward, are sometimes pronounced regularly like south: this, however, is far from the prevailing pronunciation. This is the sound this diphthong always has when the accent is not on it, unless in very few instances, where the compound retains the sound of the simple, as in pronoun; but in sojourn and sojourner, with the accent on the first syllable, and in every unaccented termination in our and ous, this diphthong has exactly the sound of short u: thus favour, honour, odour, and famous, are pronounced as if written favur, honur, odur, and famus.

The third sound given to these vowels is that of oo in coo and woo, and is found in the following words: Bouge, croup, group, agroup, amour, paramour, bouse, bousy, boutefeu, capouch, cartouch, fourbe, gout (taste), and ragout (pronounced goo and ragoo), rendezvous, rouge, soup, sous (pronounced soo), surtout, through, thoroughly, toupee, or toupet, you, your, youth, tour, contour, tourney, tourney, tournament, pour, and route (a road), accoutre, billet-doux, agouti, uncouth, wound (a hurt), and routine (a beaten road).

The fourth sound of this diphthong is that of long open o, and is heard in the following words: Though, although, coulter, court, account, gourd, courtier, course, discourse, source, recourse, resource, bourn, dough, doughy, four, mould, mouldy, moult, mourn, shoulder, smoulder, soul, poultice, poult, poulterer, poultry, troul (to roll smoothly, marked by Mr. Sheridan as rhyming with doll, but more properly by Dr. Kenrick with roll), and borough, thorough, furrough, fourteen, concourse, and intercourse, preserve the diphthong in the sound of long o, though not under the accent.

The fifth sound of ou is like the noun axe, and is heard only in ought, bought, brought, much of our language is regularly accented, and how much that which is irregular is facilitated by an enumeration of the greater number of exceptions*.

But scarcely any method will be so useful for gaining the English accent as the reading of verse. This will naturally lead the ear to the right accentuation; and though a different position of the accent is frequently to be met with in the beginning of a verse, there is a sufficient regularity to render the pronouncing of verse a powerful means of obtaining such a distinction of force and feebleness as is commonly called the accent; for it may be observed, that a foreigner is no less distinguishable by placing an accent upon certain words to which the English give no stress, than by placing the stress upon a wrong syllable. Thus if a foreigner, when he calls for bread at table, by saying, give me some bread, lays an equal stress upon every word, though every word should be pronounced with its exact sound, we immediately perceive he is not a native. An Englishman would pronounce these four words like two, with the accent on the first syllable of the first, and on the last syllable of the last, as if written gíve me somebréd: or rather gíve me sumbréd; or more commonly, though vulgarly, gímme sombréd. Verse may sometimes induce a foreigner, as it does sometimes injudicious natives, to lay the accent on a syllable in long words which ought to have none: as in a couplet of Pope's Essay on Criticism:

"False eloquence, like the prismatic glass,
Its gaudy colours spreads on every place."

Here a foreigner would be apt to place an accent on the last syllable of eloquence as well as the first, which would be certainly wrong; but this fault is so trifling, when compared with that of laying the accent on the second syllable, that it almost vanishes from observation; and this misaccentuation verse will generally guard him from. The reading of verse, therefore, will, if I mistake not, be found a powerful regulator, both of accent and emphasis.

sought, besought, fought, nought, thought, methought, wrought.

The sixth sound is that of short oo, or the u in bull, and is heard only in the auxiliary verbs would, could, should, rhyming with good, hood, stood, &c.

The seventh sound is that of short o, and heard only in cough and trough, rhyming with off and scoff; and in lough, and shough, pronounced lock and shock.

* There is a peculiarity of accentuation in certain words of two syllables, which are both nouns and verbs, that is not unworthy of notice; the nouns having the accent on the first syllable, and the verbs on the last. This seems an instinctive effort in the language (if the expression will be allowed me), to compensate in some measure for the want of different terminations for these different parts of speech. The words which admit of this diversity of accent are the following:

APPENDIX:

THE Appendix being Incorporated into this Edition, no place could be found for the following class of words of the termination in ose, which are so variously accented by our Lexicographers; but which, from their form and derivation, ought certainly to be pronounced alike. This will evidently appear from the following sketch:

Ash.	Johnson.	Sheridan.	Entick.	Kentrick.	Perry.	Nares.	Scott.	Buchanan.
An'helo'se,	An'helo'se,	An'helo'se,
Silic'ulose,	Silic'ulose,			Tu'mulose,	Tu'mulose.	Veneno'sc.
Cal'culose,	Cal'culose,	Calculo'se,
Tumulo'se,	Tumulo'se,
Animo'se,	Animo'se,	Animo'se,
Vene'nose,	Vene'nose,	Vene'nose,	Vene'nose,
Aren'o'se,	Aren'o'se,	Aren'o'se,	Aren'o'se,
Silig'inose,	Silig'inose,
Cri'nose,	Cri'nose,		Cri'nose,
Ope'rose,	Ope'rose,		Ope'rose,	Ope'rose,		Ope'rose,	Ope'rose,	Ope'rose.
Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se,	Moro'se.
Ede'matose,	Ede'matose,		Ede'matose,	Ede'matose,
Com'a'tose,	Com'a'tose,		Com'a'tose,	Com'a'tose,
Acet'o'se,	Acet'o'se,	Aceto'se,	Ac'e'tose,		Ac'e'tose,		Ac'e'tose.
Aqua'se,	Aqua'se,	Aquos'se,	A'guase,			Aquos'se.
Sit'i'quose,	Sit'i'quose,	Sitiquas'se,	Sit'i'quose,	Sit'i'quose,	Sit'i'quose.
Act'u'o'se,	Act'u'o'se,
Pu'l'idose,	Pu'l'idose,	Pulido'se.

The variety of accentuation which this sketch exhibits, sufficiently shows how uncertain are our Dictionaries where usage is obscure. From the decided prevalence of the accent on the last syllable of these words, we may reasonably guess at the analogy of pronunciation, and, with very little hesitation, determine that the accent ought to be placed on the last syllable of them all.
